4 WAYS EXERCISE CAN INCREASE YOUR RESILIENCE TO MENTAL STRESS

- It's a Leg Up for your Immune System

In moderate doses, plenty of evidence suggests that regular exercise is great for immune function.

- It Blunts the Hormonal Stress Response.

Just like physical stress, psychological stress starts off a whole cascade of hormones. Cortisol is probably the best-known, but there are plenty more, like norepinephrine.

- It Changes your Gene Expression.

Everyone is born with a certain set of genes and there's nothing any of us can do about that. But you can change the expression of your genes – basically which genes get turned on or "turned off." This is called epigenetics.

- It's Anti-Inflammatory

But in the long run, regular workouts with enough breaks to recover have been shown again and again to reduce inflammation. It's the horseshoe response again: you recover from the stress and bounce back stronger.
